

Cinkciarz.pl shared an app for Apple Watch

Having already developed an app for smartwatches for Android, the FX company also introduced a piece of software for devices produced by the company from Cupertino

The Cinkciarz.pl app allows the tracking of current exchange rates offered by the company. Four of them, that is the Swiss franc, euro, American dollar and the British pound, are placed on the main screen of the app. The information about the rates is updated every 15 seconds.

In June Cinkciarz.pl introduced an app for the intelligent watches using Android Wear. It displays the currency rates of three currencies selected by the user. The app is installed on a smartphone, which communicates with the smartwatch via Bluetooth.

Financial institutions are very eager to invest in apps for smartwatches lately. They came into the ING Bank Śląski's offer recently. Its app is aimed towards the bank's corporate clients. Individual clients of Millennium Bank have also been able to use an app for smartwatches with Android Wear for a couple of months now. Moreover, this bank will soon introduce an app for Apple Watch.

Right now, smartwatches from trusted producers can be bought from a couple of hundred to 1.5 thousand PLN. They are offered by all of the most important smartphone producers. At the moment they are just gadgets – not very useful, most of all because of their weak batteries. If the device is forced to perform actively, in most cases the battery will need charging in less than a day.
